ALL TELEGRAPH INSTRUMENTS, TYPEWRITERS, PHOTOGRAPHS BARRED FROM COURT

(By United Press)
Chicago, May 15.—With both sides announcing readiness, Judge Thomas J. Lynch of the criminal court today cleared his docket in preparation for the sensational trial scheduled for Monday.

William D. Shepherd charged with killing his youthful ward, Billy McClintock, to obtain the McClintock fortune, said today he was supremely confident of acquittal.

Mrs. Julie Shepherd, his wife who was cleared of the charge by the grand jury of any connection with death of Billy or his mother, Mrs. Emma McClintock, said, "The hand of God saved me from this plot and He will save my husband."

W. W. O'Brien, one of the defense attorneys, said no effort would be made for a continuance.

Officials estimate it will take from two to four weeks to select a jury and from three to four weeks for the trial. Acting on a decision of all the judges of the court, Judge Lynch has barred telegraph instruments, typewriters and photographs from the court. A large ante-room has been turned over to the press where many telegraph wires are being installed. Like the Leopold-Loeb trial, admittance will be by card.

"As a result every man I take to jail is my friend. Many criminals whom I have helped send to prison look me up when they get out. They all appreciate a square deal."

Capt. Porter never has been fired at during his secret service career. Most officers who are shot are too rough in their tactics, he said.

MOVIE CZAR EXPECTED AT THE CONVENTION—LAEMMLE JOINS INDEPENDENTS

Minneapolis, May 15.—Will Hays, "czar of the movies," object of attack at the convention of the Independent Producers & Exhibitors association here, may drop into Milwaukee today or tomorrow and carry the battle right into the camp of the opposition, according to rumors circulated here today.

It was said Hays was in Chicago yesterday on some business in connection with the film interests he represents and that he expected to be in attendance at the convention before it closes tomorrow.

Carl Laemmle, "little giant" of the films, formerly proprietor of a clothing store at Oshkosh, Wis., has thrown the weight of his Universal organization on the side of the independent producers and exhibitors against the so-called "film trust."

Laemmle entered the fight against the so-called combine, following a series of announcements that a total of $400,000—$100,000 in cold cash—had been subscribed for the fighting fund.

Laemmle's contribution was $50,000, according to Emmanuel Goldstein, treasurer of the organization. As the general plan for the fight "for survival" had been virtually agreed on, it is expected a definite program will be ready for presentation to the third convention session today. As the questioning started, he acted as though he was having difficulty in breathing and loosened his tie and collar. Shortly afterward he slumped forward in his chair unconscious.

Frazier's most consistent answer yesterday was, "I don't remember." This was the reply to questions concerning his childhood, his entry into the army, his service in France and his life since the war. Frazier explained that after he was under fire and supposedly shell shocked, he was unable to remember details. After Frazier's fainting spell, several former service men in old Company D, Rochester testified, but William Pierce, lieutenant, was the only man yesterday who positively identified the Indian.

In most instances Frazier replied he could not remember. While testifying being in Deming, New Mexico, French inquired of him at what hotel he stopped. Frazier fell from the witness stand before he could reply.

His side, however, scored a big victory today when Judge Joseph W. Molyneux ruled testimony admissible of former service men who say they served with Frazier in Company D in 136th Infantry at Camp Cody. Up to noon today the following had identified him as a former army comrade: A. L. Torgelson, Joseph Daly, David Costello and R. C. Anderson, all of Rochester. SHAKES HANDS WITH THE KING

AMERICAN GLOVE MANUFACTURER LIFTS HIMSELF INTO SPOTLIGHT

(By United Press) London, May 15.—Some men are born famous; others achieve fame, but John Cowrie, well known glove manufacturer of Des Moines lifted himself right into the limelight and became the most talked of man in England for a day when he stepped up to King George at the Wembley Exhibition yesterday and thrust out an eager hand.

"How do you do, king — shake hands with America," said Cowrie.

Minnesota's Name Comes From Two Indian Words

St. Paul, May 15.—Minnesota—the land of 10,000 lakes—derives its name from two Indian words. The words are "Min-nee Sotah," the first meaning water and the other sky-colored. These signify "sky-tinted water," referring to the numerous crystal streams and lakes which mirror the soft blue of its skies.

The lakes form one of the characteristic charms of the state. They vary from one to 30 miles in diameter. The largest is Red Lake in the extreme north central part. Others among the largest lakes in the state are Vermillion, Itasca, Bemidji, Cass, Winnibigoshish, Leech, Mille Lacs and Minnetonka.

SEVERE CROSS EXAMINATION AS TO HIS IDENTITY

SUPPOSED INDIAN WAR VETERAN WAS UNCONSCIOUS FOR 20 MINUTES

PREVIOUSLY ACTED AS THOUGH HE HAD DIFFICULTY IN BREATHING

(By United Press) Minneapolis, May 15.—Arthur Frazier, supposed Indian war veteran, confused and dazed, fainted during the cross examination late yesterday in his identification case against the government to collect service claims.

Frazier was carried into the chamber of Federal Judge Joseph W. Moynaux and later transferred to the hospital. He was unconscious approximately 20 minutes. After testifying on direct examination, Frazier was cross examined by Lafayette French, Jr., United States District Attorney. As the questioning started, he acted as though he was having difficulty in breathing and loosened his tie and collar. Shortly afterward he slumped forward in his chair unconscious.

Frazier's most consistent answer yesterday was, "I don't remember." This was the reply to questions concerning his childhood, his entry into the army, his service in France and his life since the war. Frazier explained that after he was under fire and supposedly shell shocked, he was unable to remember details.

After Frazier's fainting spell, several former service men in old Company D, Rochester testified, but William Pierce, lieutenant, was the only man yesterday who positively identified the Indian.

3 COMRADES TESTIFY AS TO FRAZIER'S IDENTITY

Minneapolis, May 15.—For the second time in two days Arthur Lopez-Frazier, trying to prove he is a world war veteran, collapsed when testifying this morning in federal district court here.

Both times he was facing a fusillade of cross questions aimed at him by Lafayette French, Jr., United States District Attorney. When he fainted this morning French was questioning him relative to his activities and places he was at while Frazier claims he was in Camp Cody, New Mexico.

In most instances Frazier replied he could not remember. While testifying being in Deming, New Mexico, French inquired of him at what hotel he stopped. Frazier fell from the witness stand before he could reply.

His side, however, scored a big victory today when Judge Joseph W. Moynaux ruled testimony admissible of former service men who say they served with Frazier in Company D in 136th Infantry at Camp Cody. Up to noon today the following had identified him as a former army comrade: A. L. Torgelson, Joseph Daly, David Costello and R. C. Anderson, all of Rochester. Efforts to admit the testimony of these and other service men failed yesterday.

Providence, R. I., May 15. — A magnificent, bubbling fountain of wisdom caused William Jennings Bryan to leave the platform at Brown University last night. The common-or was queried on a point of religion against science. Simultaneously he was hissed and booed.

"I have come a long way to address you," Bryan told the students, "but I shall certainly have to retire before this magnificent, bubbling fountain of wisdom."

He retired at once without answering the query.

Light From Tree's Petals

Travelers tell of a peculiar tree that grows in certain sections of India that produces great quantities of flowers with long petals, a crop of petals falling from the tree each day. All are gathered by the women, placed in the sun to dry and then are used as candles and provide a pleasant light. The large trees are said to produce 300 pounds of flowers in a single season and the dried petals are the principal aid of the people for the lights they need in their homes.

Support for Plant Stalk

A charming support to hold steady the stalk of a plant in a pot consists of a slender stick with a painted wooden bird nailed or glued at its top. Such a bird may be cut, in silhouette, from thin soft wood and painted in bright colors with oil or house paints, and afterward varnished. Even though the work is somewhat roughly done, the effect will still be good.

Saturday Afternoon Holiday

For First National Bank Employees During the Months June, July and August

The First National Bank is again preparing to observe the Saturday hours this year according to the action taken by the Directors about a year ago when they amended the By Laws by making the business hours for Saturday from 9:00 o'clock A. M. to 1:00 o'clock P. M., during the months of June, July and August.

This will enable the employees to enjoy a few more hours of out door recreation during the summer season, thereby better fitting themselves physically for their work during the long, cold winter months to follow.

This plan seemed to work very successfully last season and it is hoped that the patrons of the bank will enter into the spirit of the change, made for the benefit of the employees, and arrange their business in such a manner as to avoid any inconvenience.

Wealth Through Misfortune
At the end of life a man finds himself rich, not so much by his fortunes as by his misfortunes. The Persians had a vase of glass which when empty was colorless, but when filled with wine flashed forth many rare pictures. So a bosom empty of a heart of pain makes a lusterless life, but a bosom in which a heart bleeds reveals hidden virtues.—Tilton.

"MISS BLUEBEARD"

COMING SOON

"Biggest Laugh of the Year" is Verdict of All Who Have Seen the Picture

BENEFIT LIBRARY BOARD

Comes to the New Park Theatre on Next Thursday and Friday, May 21 and 22

"The biggest laugh picture of the year" is the verdict of all who have seen "Miss Bluebeard" the Paramount feature film starring Bebe Daniels, which comes to the New Park theatre on next Thursday and Friday, May 21st and 22nd, as a benefit for the Brainerd Library Board.

Bebe Daniels in any picture insures its success, but in "Miss Bluebeard" she is given her best opportunity to display her comedy talents, and she takes full advantage of that opportunity. It has been a long time since this favorite star has been given a comedy role, and fans everywhere are welcoming her back with a rush.

In "Miss Bluebeard" Bebe is bizarre, piquant and naive all in one move. She plays the part of a French actress with a verve and dash that will clinch her popularity more strongly than ever with her old friends, and bring many new worshippers to her shrine.

The production is an adaptation of Avery Hopwood's big Broadway success by the same name that kept Little Old New York in an uproar for over a year. The story is a love farce of a gay actress who gets married and then discovers that she has not one husband, but two.

Complications? Laughs? The stage play was a riot in New York, and crammed theatres in the large cities on a country-wide tour, but the picture is said to be even better than the play, and brings Bebe and her cast to the screen in role different from anything that has been attempted in the past.

Robert Frazer and Raymond Griffith are the co-stars supporting Miss Daniels, and there is a friendly rivalry between the two to see who can leave the best impression with the audience.

And for the ladies, Miss Daniels wears gorgeous gowns, each one a real Parisian model of the type that only a woman can appreciate.

Bebe Daniels, in addition to bringing to Brainerd the big laughfest of the year, is assisting a most worthy cause, for the funds realized will be used by the Brainerd Library Board in extending its service to patrons of the public library. The board asks the hearty support of the public in this effort, on next Thursday and Friday.

THE START-OFF OF CIVILIZATION

RECENT discoveries have pushed back the veil of the past. A skull found in South Africa indicates that a type of man lived 5,000,000 years ago. Barren sands of Mesopotamia indicate a high degree of civilization existed 5,000 years ago.

Long before Izaak Walton compiled his manual on fishing, the Kish sportsmen used their hooks and went fishing, although brick tablets of the age just uncovered fail to show the kind of fish caught. The ladies of 5,000 years ago had their lipsticks, their vanity cases, their rouge and powder. There were luxuriant baths too.

It's no wonder the ancient Egyptians built their pyramids, if for no other reason than to leave a lasting landmark indicating that such and such an age flourished sometime. The Egyptians probably found enough buried ages to indicate that a good-sized marker was needed to keep historians of the future posted as to their existence.

Now the Kish people of 5,000 years ago left no surface memorials and were only stumbled on when somebody dug through some hundred feet of desert sand in Mesopotamia.

As each age seems to be an evanescent affair, it behooves us to leave a fitting, lasting memorial for posterity, so that in case another ice age slips over the universe and disarranges our physical geography, that he who comes afterward may read of some of our puny efforts at altering the march of world events. The various earthquake tremors are indications of a slipping base.

BAY-WINDOW STOMACHS

AFTER one amble past the age of 50, many a man finds it hard to lace his shoes, still more difficult to run two blocks, awfully hard to split kindling wood, increasingly difficult to take down storm windows and put up screens. Much of life of a sedentary nature is quickly reflected in the increasing equatorial girth of the digestive regions.

And then comes golf! Thin men and fat men take to it with avidity. It is a salvation for both. The other day we came upon a man who had just played his second game of golf and he just couldn't help telling everybody about it. He had made the nine holes in 71 and his partner, more experienced, of course, had chalked in a 56.

The game which Joe Bush pitched and won against the Giants in his first world series invasion was nothing compared with this golf game. There were no spectators to the momentous golf game, just two vitally interested players, one an experienced, seasoned veteran just initiating the novice in the wonderful game of golf.

The game has remarkable advantages. Mike Ryan, never gifted with any too much avoidupois, has gained 10 pounds playing golf. Carl Wright, who inclines to embonpoint, has lost five pounds in the excitement. Both report increasing appetites for golf and food.

THOSE WHO LIVE LONGEST

IN spite of the fact that only three per cent of the country's rural residents are estimated to observe the fundamentals of health in the disposal of their sewage and the safeguarding of their drinking water supply, rural residents of Minnesota live longer than their city brothers. According to an authoritative bulletin there are 28 per cent more deaths per hundred thousand population in the larger places than there are in places having less than 10,000 people.

This coincides with conditions in New York City. Where do you suppose one will find the lowest death rate in that teeming city? Over on the East Side, dirty, grimy, over-populated, crowded for elbow room, with kids sunning themselves on fire escapes and their only amusement, if they ever find room on a street or alley, to chase an ice wagon on a hot summer's day and grab a piece of fallen ice.

There are instances, as in the days of happy childhood, when mud and dirt and good health seem to be associated in equal quantities. The cry in those days of childhood must be, "Get back to the land!"

BORROWING MONEY

It is hard, at times, to borrow money, and harder sometimes, to repay a loan. It is worth noting the excuses made at times to sidestep payment of an obligation.

The other day we happened to be in a bank and overheard a conversation. It seemed the man had borrowed some money and the principal was due and he was crawling around to just pay the interest and continue the note, and here's the excuse we heard enunciated:

"You see, it's this way. I bought a car and had to make a payment on the car and so I couldn't pay my note. You see you can't get anywhere if you haven't got a car. Everybody in my neighborhood has a car. I couldn't go to my next door neighbor's funeral if I didn't have a car, and you wouldn't want me to stay home from the funeral, would you?"

They say many a banker has a sympathetic heart and maybe he relented so that the man would be in shape to go to any funerals, due to occur at some time or another, as we all are closely related to the dust which claims us at the finish.

TRAVELING in the same rut grows monotonous and may lead to the same results as using an old typewriter ribbon until the ink is hammered out. All the work done after that leaves but a fading impression.

THE recent jumpy feeling in the wheat pit did not all emanate from natural causes, the government ascertains. So far it has failed to uncover proof upon which convictions could be obtained.

GERMANY has elected General von Hindenburg as its president. France, says the St. Cloud Daily Journal-Press, can checkmate this move by making General Foch president.

ST. CLOUD continues to get more industries. The latest is that of manufacturing automatic storm sash lifters and the factory will employ ten men at the start.

Fort That Has Figured in American History

Fort Michilimackinac, invariably clipped to "Mackinac," resulted from Father Marquette's mission established in 1673 on Point St. Ignace, and La Salle's visit there two years later. The first defense, as found by La Salle, was a palisade, and the garrison consisted of Indians. La Salle did much to strengthen this post. La Motte Cadillac also was there and further added to the strength of the fort. Then Detroit swung into the lead as a fur and trading center, and in 1712 the settlement was moved to the south side of the strait, where Mackinaw City stands. There the second Fort Mackinac was built. It was this Fort Charlevoix describes in Vol. II of "A Journal of a Voyage to North America." This fort was surrendered to the English when France lost out. It was captured by Pontiac's Chippewas and Ottawas on King George's birthday (June 4), 1763. It was without a garrison for four years. At the beginning of the Revolution it was strengthened and heavily garrisoned. The English commander, fearing capture, moved his forces to the island of Mackinac in November, 1770, where the third fort of that name was built. It was occupied by the British until July, 1780, but did not figure in the war. It was turned over to the United States in 1796. A description of the last Fort Mackinac, as it was in 1880, is found in Utah Tracy's report on it to Samuel Dexter, secretary of war. It had a garrison of 57 men at the outbreak of the War of 1812. It was captured by an overwhelming British force of soldiers and Indians, and its capture brought many tribes to the British standard. The blockhouse on the hill back of the old fort was built by the British during the war. It was surrendered to the United States in July, 1818.

Got Out of It Neatly

Sir Henry Robertson was an official of the local government board for Ireland, and he had been entertained by an old priest who, finding his larder low, had prepared a large pancake an inch thick, swimming in grease, for his guest's supper. Sir Henry, with respect for his digestion, slipped it into a pocket containing two leather bags, and then mailed one of them at the village post office. Upon finding a convenient ditch in which to deposit the pancake, he looked in the bag and found it full of papers. He had mailed the pancake to the office of the government board. Presently he received an angry letter from headquarters, inquiring for what purpose the contents of the pouch were forwarded. "I did not wish to give away my carelessness," says Sir Henry, "so I headed my reply, 'Failure of the potato crop—sample of food consumed by small farmers in the west.'"

Intelligent Deer

Mrs. Della Austin, postmaster at Fort Kent Mills, Maine, has a pet deer which she has had since it was a fawn and it has become thoroughly domesticated. Not only that, but it shows marked housekeeping abilities. A little outhouse has been provided for the deer, and it has an electric light which may be turned on with a string. The door is kept latched to keep out intruders, but when the Austin deer feels the need of food or shelter it will nose up the hasp, enter, pull on the electric light and proceed contentedly to munch the supply of Aroostook potatoes which are kept in a box, says the Boston Globe.

Remarkable, If True

"Academies," said Robert W. Chambers at a dinner in New York, "always bar out the very people they should welcome in. Thus the French academy barred out Zola, and thus our American academy bars out Dreiser. 'The great American painter Whistler, once visited an exhibition of the Royal academy at the Grosvenor galleries in London. After reviewing a mile or two of execrable canvasses, Whistler yawned and said: 'Great men's origins are always interesting, but it isn't generally known that several Royal academicians actually began life as artists.'"

Most listeners have remarked the fact that the broadcaster speaks slowly and distinctly at the outset and frequently pauses—ahem—between words.

Then suddenly he changes his pace and we know that the official in charge of the station has nodded to him that his time is almost up and he will have to go some of the way to get all of his scheduled address within the prescribed limit.—Judge.

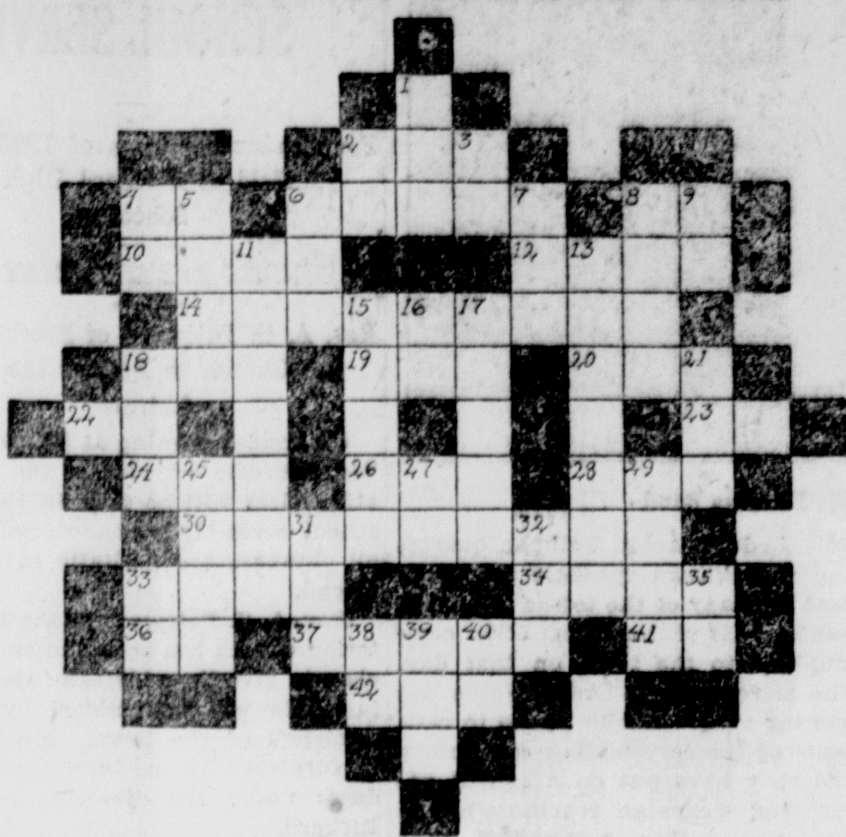

Airman Kills Antelope

George Pomeroy, an airplane pilot, who runs between Omaha and Cheyenne, having made good time on the early part of his trip, spotted an antelope from his high point of vantage while flying over Nebraska and descending, shot it. He crammed the antelope into his plane and continued his journey, only later to be apprehended and fined $155 for his sport by the game warden at Lincoln.

First "National" Journal

The National Intelligencer, established in Washington, in 1800, by Samuel Harrison Smith, was claimed to be the first newspaper in this country that might justly assert itself as "national."

But They Call You Queer

To know what you prefer, instead of humbly saying Amen to what the world tells you should prefer, is to have kept your soul alive.—New York Telegraph.

World's Earliest Banks

The earliest banks on record were the national temples, such as Delphi and Delos in Greece. The money they received in deposit they loaned out at rates of interest varying from 10 to 30 per cent per year. Private bankers were first heard of in Babylon in the time of Nebuchadnezzar about 600 B. C. Theocris, Tacitus and Suetonius all allude to the existence of banks in their histories.

"Banking" System Old

The Roman emperors lent money upon land. The lending of money on the security of movable articles, which were said to be pledged, became common in European countries during the fifteenth century. Out of this grew the system known as pawnbroking, which was specially regulated in England in 1756, and 27 years later the business of pawnbroking was licensed.

THE START-OFF OF CIVILIZATION

RECENT discoveries have pushed back the veil of the past. A skull found in South Africa indicates that a type of man lived 5,000,000 years ago. Barren sands of Mesopotamia indicate a high degree of civilization existed 5,000 years ago.

Long before Izaak Walton compiled his manual on fishing, the Kish sportsmen used their hooks and went fishing, although brick tablets of the age just uncovered fail to show the kind of fish caught. The ladies of 5,000 years ago had their lipsticks, their vanity cases, their rouge and powder. There were luxuriant baths too.

It's no wonder the ancient Egyptians built their pyramids, if for no other reason than to leave a lasting landmark indicating that such and such an age flourished sometime. The Egyptians probably found enough buried ages to indicate that a good-sized marker was needed to keep historians of the future posted as to their existence.

Now the Kish people of 5,000 years ago left no surface memorials and were only stumbled on when somebody dug through some hundred feet of desert sand in Mesopotamia.

As each age seems to be an evanescent affair, it behooves us to leave a fitting, lasting memorial for posterity, so that in case another ice age slips over the universe and disarranges our physical geography, that he who comes afterward may read of some of our puny efforts at altering the march of world events. The various earthquake tremors are indications of a slipping base.

BAY-WINDOW STOMACHS

AFTER one ambles past the age of 50, many a man finds it hard to lace his shoes, still more difficult to run two blocks, awfully hard to split kindling wood, increasingly difficult to take down storm windows and put up screens. Much of life of a sedentary nature is quickly reflected in the increasing equatorial girth of the digestive regions.

And then comes golf! Thin men and fat men take to it with avidity. It is a salvation for both. The other day we came upon a man who had just played his second game of golf and he just couldn't help telling everybody about it. He had made the nine holes in 71 and his partner, more experienced, of course, had chalked in a 56.

The game which Joe Bush pitched and won against the Giants in his first world series inquisition was nothing compared with this golf game. There were no spectators to the momentous golf game, just two vitally interested players, one an experienced, seasoned veteran just initiating the novice in the wonderful game of golf.

The game has remarkable advantages. Mike Ryan, never gifted with any too much avoidupois, has gained 10 pounds playing golf. Carl Wright, who inclines to embonpoint, has lost five pounds in the excitement. Both report increasing appetites for golf and food.

THOSE WHO LIVE LONGEST

IN spite of the fact that only three per cent of the country's rural residents are estimated to observe the fundamentals of health in the disposal of their sewage and the safeguarding of their drinking water supply, rural residents of Minnesota live longer than their city brothers. According to an authoritative bulletin there are 38 per cent more deaths per hundred thousand population in the larger places than there are in places having less than 10,000 people.

This coincides with conditions in New York City. Where do you suppose one will find the lowest death rate in that teeming city? Over on the East Side, dirty, grimy, over-populated, crowded for elbow room, with kids sunning themselves on fire escapes and their only amusement, if they ever find room on a street or alley, to chase an ice wagon on a hot summer's day and grab a piece of fallen ice.

There are instances, as in the days of happy childhood, when mud and dirt and good health seem to be associated in equal quantities. The cry in those days of childhood must be, "Get back to the land!"

BORROWING MONEY

It is hard, at times, to borrow money, and harder sometimes, to repay a loan. It is worth noting the excuses made at times to sidestep payment of an obligation.

The other day we happened to be in a bank and overheard a conversation. It seemed the man had borrowed some money and the principal was due and he was crawling around to just pay the interest and continue the note, and here's the excuse we heard enunciated:

"You see, it's this way. I bought a car and had to make a payment on the car and so I couldn't pay my note. You see you can't get anywhere if you haven't got a car. Everybody in my neighborhood has a car. I couldn't go to my next door neighbor's funeral if I didn't have a car, and you wouldn't want me to stay home from the funeral, would you?"

They say many a banker has a sympathetic heart and maybe he relented so that the man would be in shape to go to any funerals, due to occur at some time or another, as we all are closely related to the dust which claims us at the finish.

TRAVELING in the same rut grows monotonous and may lead to the same results as using an old typewriter ribbon until the ink is hammered out. All the work done after that leaves but a fading impression.

THE recent jumpy feeling in the wheat pit did not all emanate from natural causes, the government ascertains. So far it has failed to uncover proof upon which convictions could be obtained.

GERMANY has elected General von Hindenburg as its president. France, says the St. Cloud Daily Journal-Press, can checkmate this move by making General Foch president.

ST. CLOUD continues to get more industries. The latest is that of manufacturing automatic storm sash lifters and the factory will employ ten men at the start.

Fort That Has Figured

in American History

Fort Michilimackinac, invariably clipped to "Mackinac," resulted from Father Marquette's mission established in 1673 on Point St. Ignace, and La Salle's visit there two years later. The first defense, as found by La Salle, was a palisade, and the garrison consisted of Indians. La Salle did much to strengthen this post. La Motte Cadillac also was there and further added to the strength of the fort. Then Detroit swung into the lead as a fur and trading center, and in 1712 the settlement was moved to the south side of the strait, where Mackinac City stands. There the second Fort Mackinac was built. It was this Fort Charlevoix describes in Vol. II of "A Journal of a Voyage to North America." This fort was surrendered to the English when France lost out. It was captured by Pontiac's Chippewas and Ottawas on King George's birthday (June 4), 1763. It was without a garrison for four years. At the beginning of the Revolution it was strengthened and heavily garrisoned. The English commander, fearing capture, moved his forces to the island of Mackinac in November, 1779, where the third fort of that name was built. It was occupied by the British until July, 1780, but did not figure in the war. It was turned over to the United States in 1790. A description of the last Fort Mackinac, as it was in 1880, is found in Ulrich Tracy's report on it to Samuel Dexter, secretary of war. It had a garrison of 57 men at the outbreak of the War of 1812. It was captured by an overwhelming British force of soldiers and Indians, and its capture brought many tribes to the British standard. The blockhouse on the hill back of the old fort was built by the British during the war. It was surrendered to the United States in July, 1818.

Got Out of It Neatly

Sir Henry Robertson was an official of the local government board for Ireland, and he had been entertained by an old priest who, finding his larder low, had prepared a large pancake as thick thick, swimming in grease, for his guest's supper. Sir Henry, with respect for his digestion, slipped it into a pocket containing two leather bags, and then mailed one of them at the village post office. Upon finding a convenient ditch in which to deposit the pancake, he looked in the bag and found it full of papers. He had mailed the pancake to the office of the government board. Presently he received an angry letter from headquarters, inquiring for what purpose the contents of the pouch were forwarded. "I did not wish to give away my card-letters," says Sir Henry, "so I headed my reply, 'Failure of the potato crop—sample of food consumed by small farmers in the west.'"

Intelligent Deer

Mrs. Della Austin, postmaster at Fort Kent Mills, Maine, has a pet deer which she has had since it was a fawn and it has become thoroughly domesticated. Not only that, but it shows marked housekeeping abilities. A little outhouse has been provided for the deer, and it has an electric light which may be turned on with a string. The door is kept hinged to keep out intruders, but when the Austin deer feels the need of food or shelter it will nose up the hasp, enter, pull on the electric light and proceed contentedly to munch the supply of Aroostook potatoes which are kept in a box, says the Boston Globe.

The Dancer Who Paid

By MARTIN M. CHESTER

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

ALL Glenville knew that Judge Smith sent his wife through school before he married her; and all Glenville, including Lora Stone, knew no happier family than the Judge, his wife, and their adopted son, "Stubby."

Of course the Smiths were happy. Lora reflected—with all that money. Stubby was rich enough to go to the State university for twenty years if he so wanted, while she, Lora, poor and an orphan, had no right even to think of going.

Here Lora had an inspiration for recklessness. Why not advertise—in a city paper, and giving a Glenville post office box—that she would marry any man who would first send her through the State university. Before the answers came she could confide in the postmaster.

Her advertisement brought Lora several offers, only one of which she thought sincere. J. Algernon Macfadden wrote little and to the point. He was preparing for the foreign field. He suggested a course of pre-missionary study for Lora. If she felt called to share his life, she would for four years receive each month a bank draft for one hundred dollars. A personal interview was inconvenient at this time, but when her education was finished, they could meet, preliminary to their wedding, and exchange credentials.

"The old mummy!" Lora exclaimed, and decided almost at once to accept his offer. When she sent him her name and address she pasted to the sheet a little snapshot of herself.

Three weeks later, along with several girl friends and "Stubby" Smith, Lora went up to college. J. Algernon Macfadden was four long years away, and this was life! But with J. Algernon's hundred swelling her monthly pittance, she was—she knew it beyond a doubt—charming; and as gay as "Stubby" Smith himself. And "Stubby," now registered as John M. Smith, freshman, while nice to all the girls, rather specialized on Lora. This gave her an added thrill. He had not done that in Glenville.

In her sophomore year "Stubby" tried to propose to her, but she would not let him. She didn't want to tell him about J. Algernon. In her junior year, however, "Stubby" definitely asked her to marry him, and Lora, concealing all the particulars—"Stubby" would despise her if he knew—told him she was engaged to a missionary.

"Stubby" listened patiently. "Pooh, Pooh!" he said. The reverend hasn't scored yet—isn't even in the game—and I'm going to be right here till the last tinkle of the wedding bell."

As commencement day drew nearer and nearer, she realized that her debt would be exceedingly difficult to pay. Her dance was at an end and she did not want to face the piper. When she thought of life in Abyssinia the merry smile of "Stubby" and the love in his steady eyes blotted the picture. When she read over the letters J. Algernon had written she felt even more sorry for herself.

Then came the day when—though she never intended it—she found herself in "Stubby's" arms—admitting she loved him and confessing all her shameful bargain with J. Algernon.

Again "Stubby" waved trouble away. "Pooh, pooh!" he said. "Easy, easy! Just you watch us! You owe this Macfadden man, or will when you graduate, forty-eight hundred dollars. We'll pay him five thousand—two hundred to the good for the emaciated little Abyssinian babies."

"But, 'Stubby,' Lora remonstrated. "There's interest, and it is compound interest on debts like that. Don't think I haven't counted it up. I wanted to earn the money and pay it back; but it's almost a thousand dollars more, 'Stubby'; it's too much. I'll just have to marry him."

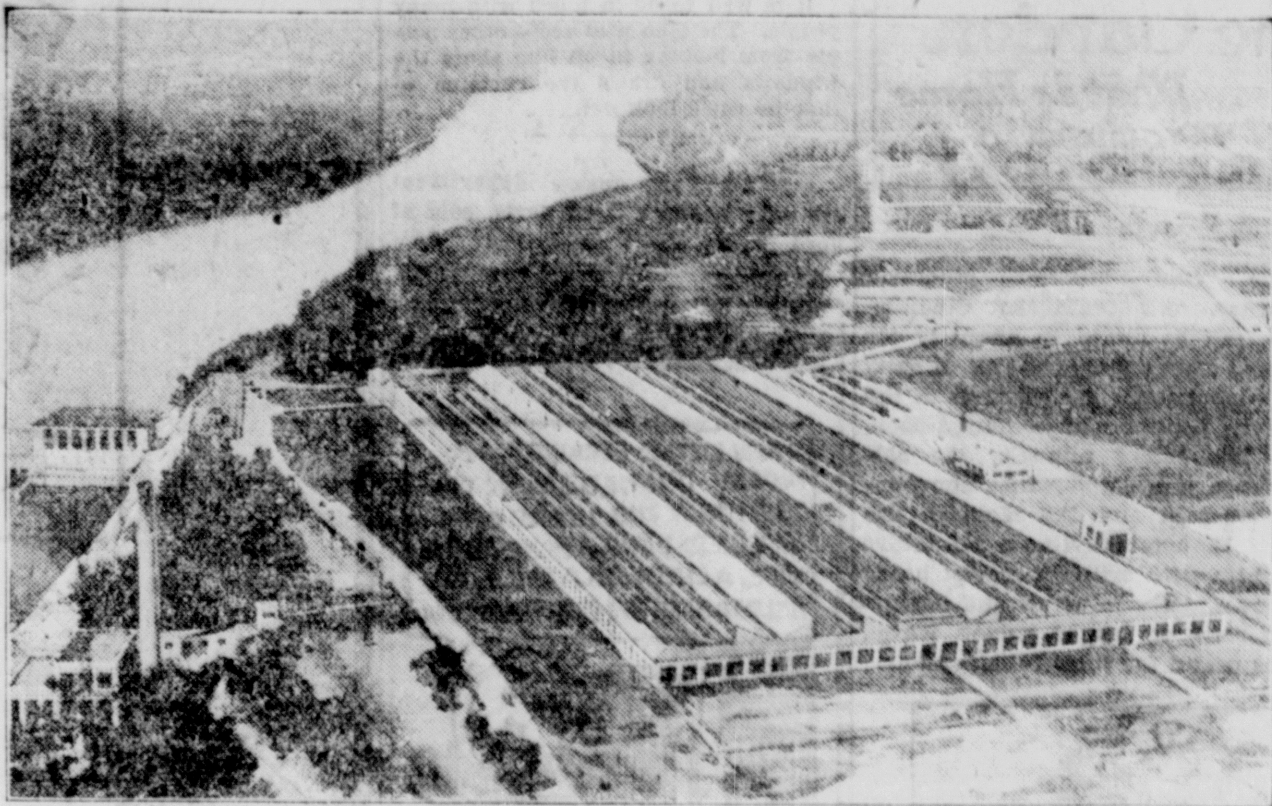

"What's a thousand dollars, when we love each other, Lora? We'll pay the man off. He'll be satisfied."

"But the money isn't everything, 'Stubby.' I owe more than that. He risked his money and his faith on a strange girl just because she wanted an education. He may be queer, but I think he must be noble."

"Noble," "Stubby's" voice had scorn. "Lora, listen to me. I've learned a good deal about this J. Algernon fellow, and the Glenville postmaster knows what I know. This Macfadden deceived a girl he expected to marry—made her believe that he was holy—out to save souls—when in fact he was planning to be an engineer. Its gospel truth. Now what do you think of him?"

"I think you're all wrong, 'Stubby.' I told the old postmaster everything. He would have said so if J. Algernon Macfadden is a bad man. Anyway I promised to meet him after I graduate and talk things over. It would be cowardly to let even you straighten things out for me until I have seen him."

"That settles it," said "Stubby" gloomily. "If you must see him, you must; but look at this first." He opened an old letter and handed it to her. Pasted on the page was a little snapshot of herself. "My Dear Mr. Macfadden," she stared at her own words. Then she felt "Stubby's" hands on her shoulders. "Lora," he said, "the old postmaster showed me your ad, encouraged me to answer it, and reminded me that as a squirming, bawling infant, long before Judge Smith adopted me, I was christened John Algernon Macfadden."

This is an air view of the new $10,000,000 Ford Motor Company plant at St. Paul which opened for business a few days ago. It has a floor area of nineteen acres, and, when going at top speed, will employ at least 10,000 men and turn out 500 cars daily. The St. Paul unit is the largest of the Ford manufacturing plants outside of Detroit, and is the largest of all the Ford assembling plants. The annual payroll will total about $25,000,000 annually.

MODERN TREND IS ALL FOR SHORTNESS

Abbreviation Seems the Order of the Day.

Longer days mean "shorter" women. For there is an epidemic of abbreviation abroad.

Women have shortened their hair, their skirts, their sleeves, in fact everything that could be shortened in their modes.

Their manners have been subjected to the same process. Engagements are shorter and marriages also.

Social life is a succession of brief functions. Dinner is the merest snapshot before a short dance in one place and a short drive to the next, Petrie Townsend writes in the continental edition of the London Mail.

"Life is short and art cannot be long," is the modern woman's motto. She will not look at a picture unless its effect is obvious and can be seized in a glance. She prefers short to long stories, and even her novels are arrangements of epigrams. Her letters are reduced to brief notes.

Absence of brevity means presence of boredom to women, who prefer even their proposals to be made by telephone. It is quicker to cut off a rejected suitor than to dismiss him.

There is also an idea abroad just now that quickness means slowness. The short meal means the perfect figure and the short skirt enables plenty of strenuous exercise to be taken even in London. Even stockings are turning into socks for the tennis player, and gloves must end at the wrist.

Short hair means a short way with maids and a quick dressing time.

If brevity is the soul of wit the shortened dinner table of today (it is rarely made to seat more than eight persons) should scintillate with sparkling conversation. Modern women's remarks, however, are so short that they tend to be monosyllabic. It is the fashion to omit all pronouns and as many verbs as possible and to rely on allusion for the rest.

Conversation is carried on in a society cipher and those who hold the key do not appear to find the expanded form particularly enlivening. Still, shorter small talk is probably a boon.

Shorter engagements mean more marriages. The finding-out process takes a little longer than the conventional six weeks, which is all that can elapse between the cut circular notification and the wedding day.

With every occupation cut short, the hours should be long, but the most frequent complaint of the modern woman is that she is so terribly busy: "The days are so short!"

The Change

"Well, how's everything been going on yurabouts whilst I've been away?" asked a citizen who had been over in Oklahoma for a number of years. "Any changes took place?"

"You betcha!" returned Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Three new houses have been built, the whole Hoekersmith and Hellbender families have wiped themselves plumb out with their fends, 'most everybody it could hurt has been killed off by bone-dry Heker, Lem Lunmoocks has married ag'in— you know, his first wife had a wart right yur on the p'int of her chin; well, his new wife has got one on the back of her neck—and I'm down in rather side of the back from what I used to be. Aw, there's a heap o' changes took place whilst you've been gone."—Kansas City Times.

Electricity in Homes

There is now approximately a billion dollars worth of electric labor savers and cooking appliances in use in the electrified homes of the United States. Of these appliances the most popular is the iron, of which there are now 8,350,000 in household use. The next most popular of electrical appliances is the cleaner with 4,575,000 in use while the third place is held by the electric washer of which 3,400,000 are now being used by the nation's housewives. Likewise, the electric fan is very popular indeed. The country over there are now about 4,150,000 of them in domestic and commercial use.

Rural Mail-Box Stand

In order to do away with unsightly rows of individual mail boxes set on posts at crossroads, groups of farmers in many communities fix their mail boxes to large discarded wagon wheels set on the ends of fence posts. A newly invented metal stand serves the same purpose and helps to keep the highway more attractive. The sides of the device can be used for posting small local notices. Mounted at the top of the center post on which the supporting frame revolves is a small road sign in the form of an arrow.

The Nut Gives Up

The Taste Is So Good

The Dancer Who Paid

By MARTIN M. CHESTER

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

ALL Glenville knew that Judge Smith sent his wife through school before he married her; and all Glenville, including Lora Stone, knew no happier family than the judge, his wife, and their adopted son, "Stubby."

Of course the Smiths were happy. Lora reflected—with all that money, Stubby was rich enough to go to the State university for twenty years if he so wanted, while she, Lora, poor and an orphan, had no right even to think of going.

Here Lora had an inspiration for recklessness. Why not advertise—in a city paper, and giving a Glenville post office box—that she would marry any man who would first send her through the State university. Before the answers came she could confide in the postmaster.

Her advertisement brought Lora several offers, only one of which she thought sincere. J. Algernon Macfadden wrote little and to the point. He was preparing for the foreign field. He suggested a course of pre-missionary study for Lora. If she felt called to share his life, she would for four years receive each month a bank draft for one hundred dollars. A personal interview was inconvenient at this time, but when her education was finished, they could meet, preliminary to their wedding, and exchange credentials.

"The old mummy!" Lora exclaimed, and decided almost at once to accept his offer. When she sent him her name and address she pasted to the sheet a little snapshot of herself.

Three weeks later, along with several girl friends and "Stubby" Smith, Lora went up to college. J. Algernon Macfadden was four long years away, and this was life! But with J. Algernon's hundred swelling her monthly pittance, she was—she knew it beyond a doubt—charming; and as gay as "Stubby" Smith himself. And "Stubby," now registered as John M. Smith, freshman, while nice to all the girls, rather specialized on Lora. This gave her an added thrill. He had not done that in Glenville.

In her sophomore year "Stubby" tried to propose to her, but she would not let him. She didn't want to tell him about J. Algernon. In her junior year, however, "Stubby" definitely asked her to marry him, and Lora, concealing all the particulars—"Stubby" would despise her if he knew—told him she was engaged to a missionary.

"Stubby" listened patiently. "Pooh, Pooh!" he said. The reverend hadn't scored yet—wasn't even in the game—and I'm going to be right here till the last tinkle of the wedding bell.

As commencement day drew nearer and nearer, she realized that her debt would be exceedingly difficult to pay. Her dance was at an end and she did not want to face the piper. When she thought of life in Abyssinia the merry smile of "Stubby" and the love in his steady eyes blotted the picture. When she read over the letters J. Algernon had written she felt even more sorry for herself.

Then came the day when—though she never intended it—she found herself in "Stubby's" arms—admitting she loved him and confessing all her shameful bargain with J. Algernon.

Again "Stubby" waved trouble away. "Pooh, pooh!" he said. "Easy, easy! Just you watch us! You owe this Macfadden man, or will when you graduate, forty-eight hundred dollars. We'll pay him five thousand—two hundred to the good for the emaciated little Abyssinian babies."

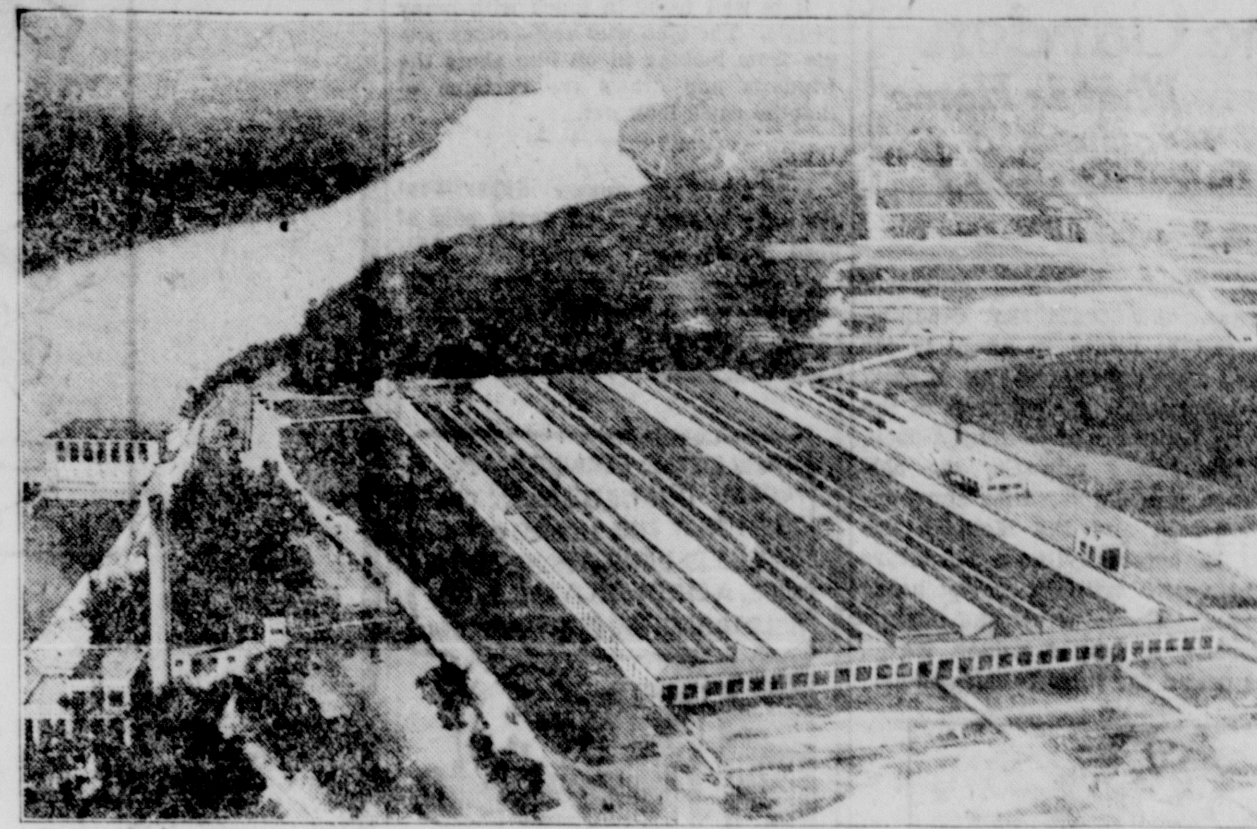

"But, 'Stubby,' Lora remonstrated. "There's interest, and it is compound interest on debts like that. Don't think I haven't counted it up. I wanted to earn the money and pay it back; but it's almost a thousand dollars more, 'Stubby'; it's too much. I'll just have to marry him."

"What's a thousand dollars, when we love each other, Lora? We'll pay the man off. He'll be satisfied."

"But the money isn't everything, 'Stubby.' I owe more than that. He risked his money and his faith on a strange girl just because she wanted an education. He may be queer, but I think he must be noble."

"Noble," "Stubby's" voice had scorn. "Lora, listen to me. I've learned a good deal about this J. Algernon fellow, and the Glenville postmaster knows what I know. This Macfadden deceived a girl he expected to marry—made her believe that he was holy—out to save souls—when in fact he was planning to be an engineer. Its gospel truth. Now what do you think of him?"

"I think you're all wrong, 'Stubby.' I told the old postmaster everything. He would have said so if J. Algernon Macfadden is a bad man. Anyway I promised to meet him after I graduate and talk things over. It would be cowardly to let even you straighten things out for me until I have seen him."

This is an air view of the new $10,000,000 Ford Motor Company plant at St. Paul which opened for business a few days ago. It has a floor area of nineteen acres, and, when going at top speed, will employ at least 10,000 men and turn out 500 cars daily. The St. Paul unit is the largest of the Ford manufacturing plants outside of Detroit, and is the largest of all the Ford assembling plants. The annual payroll will total about $25,000,000 annually.

MODERN TREND IS ALL FOR SHORTNESS

Abbreviation Seems the Order of the Day.

Longer days mean "shorter" women. For there is an epidemic of abbreviation abroad.

Women have shortened their hair, their skirts, their sleeves, in fact everything that could be shortened in their modes.

Their manners have been subjected to the same process. Engagements are shorter and marriages also.

Social life is a succession of brief functions. Dinner is the merest snapshot before a short dance in one place and a short drive to the next. Petrie Townsend writes in the continental edition of the London Mail.

"Life is short and art cannot be long" is the modern woman's motto. She will not look at a picture unless its effect is obvious and can be seized in a glance. She prefers short to long stories, and even her novels are arrangements of epigrams. Her letters are reduced to brief notes.

Absence of brevity means presence of boredom to women, who prefer even their proposals to be made by telephone. It is quicker to cut off a rejected suitor than to dismiss him.

There is also an idea abroad just now that quickness means slowness. The short meal means the perfect figure and the short skirt enables plenty of strenuous exercise to be taken even in London. Even stockings are turning into socks for the tennis player, and gloves must end at the wrist.

Short hair means a short way with maids and a quick dressing time.

If brevity is the soul of wit the shortened dinner table of today (it is rarely made to seat more than eight persons) should scintillate with sparkling conversation. Modern women's remarks, however, are so short that they tend to be monosyllabic. It is the fashion to omit all pronouns and as many verbs as possible and to rely on allusion for the rest.

Conversation is carried on in a society cipher and those who hold the key do not appear to find the expanded form particularly enlivening. Still, shorter small talk is probably a boon.

Shorter engagements mean more marriages. The finding-out process takes a little longer than the conventional six weeks, which is all that can elapse between the curt circular notification and the wedding day.

With every occupation cut short, the hours should be long, but the most frequent complaint of the modern woman is that she is so terribly busy: "The days are so short!"

The Change

"Well, how's everything been going on yurabouts whilst I've been away?" asked a citizen who had been over in Oklahoma for a number of years. "Any changes took place?"

"You betcha!" returned Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Three new houses have been built, the whole Hocker-smith and Hellbender families have wiped themselves plumb out with their feuds, 'most everybody it could hurt has been killed off by bone-dry licker. Lem Lunamocks has married ag'in—y'know, his first wife had a wart right yur on the p'int of her chin; well, his new wife has got one on the back of her neck—and I'm down in rather side of the back from what I used to be. Aw, there's a heap o' changes took place whilst you've been gone."—Kansas City Times.

Electricity in Homes

There is now approximately a billion dollars worth of electric labor savers and cooking appliances in use in the electrified homes of the United States. Of these appliances the most popular is the iron, of which there are now 8,350,000 in household use. The next most popular of electrical appliances is the cleaner with 4,575,000 in use while the third place is held by the electric washer of which 3,400,000 are now being used by the nation's housewives. Likewise, the electric fan is very popular indeed. The country over there are now about 4,150,000 of them in domestic and commercial use.

Rural Mail-Box Stand

In order to do away with unsightly rows of individual mail boxes set on posts at crossroads, groups of farmers in many communities fix their mail boxes to large discarded wagon wheels set on the ends of fence posts. A newly invented metal stand serves the same purpose and helps to keep the highway more attractive. The sides of the device can be used for posting small local notices. Mounted at the top of the center post on which the supporting frame revolves is a small road sign in the form of an arrow.

AMUSEMENTS

Acting Quite Expensive

Making pictures runs into big money. Chief cameraman, Percy Hilburn, and leading man, Robert Frazer, of Reginald Barker's Metro picture, "Women Who Give," now playing at the New Park Theatre, were sent all the way from California to Newfoundland to film scenes of the picture. Mr. Hilburn was required to photograph the exciting capture of a giant swordfish. Swordfish weigh about 600 pounds and carry a sword six feet in length. They do not travel in schools and are met singly at a distance of from 200 to 300 miles out at sea. Whenever one was lost, the captain of the fishing schooner taxed the film party its value—$100. And Bob Frazer was an inexperienced harpooner!

"Peg" Triumphate Creates More Joy

The "Peg" triumphate has produced another joy picture! Laurette Taylor, who won her way into the hearts of movie fans in her first film for Metro, J. Hartley Manners, who wrote "Peg O' My Heart" and practically all of Miss Taylor's plays in which she became the most loved of American actresses, and King Vidor, who directed "Peg" and without whom the star refused to proceed further in her film career, have combined again—this time to make a sparkling film version of Miss Taylor's second great stage success, "Happiness," which will be shown at the New Park Saturday only.

Hoxie Leads Universal Ranch Riders in His Newest Western

Supported by the Universal Ranch Riders, a score of neck-or-nothing daredevils, in a great rodeo and steeple chase followed by a bandit chase over Sierra trails and a breathless rescue on the brink of a roaring precipice, Jack Hoxie stages one of the most exciting series of adventures in his career in "Daring Chances," his new Universal feature showing at the Lyceum Theatre last time tonight.

The play starts with an accident—leads up to a rodeo and a race—then switches from a sporting event to a grim chase in reality as the gala day is punctuated with a holdup and a kidnapping, and other thrilling elements which make it an interesting drama.

Buck Jones as Romeo

His legions of admirers are due for an exceptional treat when Buck Jones opens at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday only in his latest William Fox production, "The Arizona Romeo," because this popular cowboy hero gives his version of a dashing, debonair lover and how he should conduct a campaign to win fair lady's heart. Lucy Fox happens to be the lady he courts in this case and it is said she gives one of her best performances as an eastern belle who ventures to open a manicure shop in a town where her only patrons are rough-and-ready cow-punchers.

WCCO MAY GET PERMISSION TO USE 2,000-WATT POWER

Minneapolis, May 15.—WCCO, the Gold Medal station, may broadcast on 2,000 watts power before long, it was announced today.

The announcement was made following the visit of Robert E. Earle, assistant radio inspector for the 9th district.

The additional power would make WCCO heard more plainly in distant parts of the country. It is being heard in virtually every part of the United States with its present 1,500 watts.

Mr. Earle said receiving conditions were better here than in most parts of this district because of the cooperation of power companies and other sources of radio interference.

Annuals for Foliage Effects

Many annuals are as valuable or even more valuable for their foliage than their bloom and are very useful in the garden. Some of them owe their entire beauty to brilliantly colored foliage. The prickly poppies, argemones, now coming in fine double hybrids and ranging from white to light yellow, have handsome thistlelike foliage of gray tones with white veinings in addition to their silky bloom. They are always ornamental.

The most brilliant of the foliage

The "dusty millers," cineraria maritima and centaurea candidissima, can be raised in quantity for edgings from a single packet of seed. The euphorbias, close relatives of the brilliant poinsettia of holiday season, give two showy annuals, the old-fashioned green and white snow-on-the-mountain and the Mexican fire plant, E. heterophylla, a miniature poinsettia with brilliant scarlet heads of leaves. The feverfew and nasturtium come in bright golden leaved forms useful for their foliage alone.

annuals is the amaranthus, a glorified pig weed which has arrayed itself in gorgeous garments. Burbank has produced some wonderfully brilliant types of this plant. Ranging from dark purple to glowing scarlets, these easily grown annuals make brilliant display.

The cannas of stately foliage and gorgeous bloom are not hard to raise from seed if the hard, shot-like seeds are filed thin on one side and soaked in warm water for 24 hours before planting. They bloom the first season from seed.

The coleus, most brilliant of foliage plants, may be raised as easily from seed as the salvia, a relative, and the purple-leaved perillas so much used in the park are also easy to grow in quantity.

Of the ornamental grasses, the annual pennisetums are much used and are handsome edgings. They are Abyssinian grasses with feathery plumes and bronzy foliage. They grow as readily as lawn grass and make quick display when they have been given a good start.

His last works published in 1923

Portia's father was old-fashioned

In the days of Shakespeare's famous heroine, buying and selling were contests of wits. In Venice, haggling and dickering were the vogue. Along the Rialto, sharp practice was the rule. Every purchase of silk or spices was made at the buyer's risk. One had to be a shrewd judge of values and one's fellows to escape trickery.

Portia's father—a merchant—was used to the ideas of guess, luck and accident. So much so, indeed, that it seemed natural to him to entrust the choice of his daughter's husband to three closed caskets and a lucky guess!

Nowadays, we do not transact business blindly—nor leave important decisions to chance. It is not necessary for us to gamble when we buy. Commodities are identified for us by trade-marks. Manufacturers go to the advertising columns to tell us about their products. Merchants describe their merchandise—price, quality and service.

By reading advertisements, we get a knowledge of goods and stores that we can depend on. Advertising reduces chance, in buying, to a minimum.

This will be the local's last home game of the season, their remaining two games to be played out of town, so it is hoped that there will be as large a crowd as possible present.

B. H. S. has had a very successful season to date, winning two games from Crosby-Ironton, one from Little Falls last Wednesday afternoon by a score of 7 to 4, and losing two to St. Cloud Tech. This makes the season percentage so far of three games won and two lost.

It is not known exactly how strong a team Aitkin has, but it is certain that all the local fans who turn out to this game will not go away disappointed.

Engbretson will probably do the mound duty for Brainerd, with Larson on the receiving end. Remember, Fans!

Time—2:30 p. m., Saturday, May 16.
Place—Koering Field.
Attraction—B. H. S. vs. Aitkin High.
Admission—25c.

AMUSEMENTS

Acting Quite Expensive

Making pictures runs into big money. Chief cameraman, Percy Hilburn, and leading man, Robert Frazer, of Reginald Barker's Metro picture, "Women Who Give," now playing at the New Park Theatre, were sent all the way from California to Newfoundland to film scenes of the picture. Mr. Hilburn was required to photograph the exciting capture of a giant swordfish. Swordfish weigh about 600 pounds and carry a sword six feet in length. They do not travel in schools and are met singly at a distance of from 200 to 300 miles out at sea. Whenever one was lost, the captain of the fishing schooner taxed the film party its value—$100. And Bob Frazer was an inexperienced harpooner!

"Peg" Triumvirate Creates More Joy

The "Peg" triumvirate has produced another joy picture! Laurette Taylor, who won her way into the hearts of movie fans in her first film for Metro, J. Hartley Manners, who wrote "Peg O My Heart" and practically all of Miss Taylor's plays in which she became the most loved of American actresses, and King Vidor, who directed "Peg" and without whom the star refused to proceed further in her film career, have combined again—this time to make a sparkling film version of Miss Taylor's second great stage success, "Happiness," which will be shown at the New Park Saturday only.

Hoxie Leads Universal Ranch Riders in His Newest Western

Supported by the Universal Ranch Riders, a score of neck-or-nothing daredevils, in a great rodeo and steeple chase followed by a bandit chase over Sierra trails and a breathless rescue on the brink of a roaring precipice, Jack Hoxie stages one of the most exciting series of adventures in his career in "Daring Chances," his new Universal feature showing at the Lyceum Theatre last time tonight.

The play starts with an accident—leads up to a rodeo and a race—then switches from a sporting event to a grim chase in reality as the gala day is punctuated with a holdup and a kidnapping, and other thrilling elements which make it an interesting drama.

Buck Jones as Romeo

His legions of admirers are due for an exceptional treat when Buck Jones opens at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday only in his latest William Fox production, "The Arizona Romeo," because this popular cowboy hero gives his version of a dashing, debonair lover and how he should conduct a campaign to win fair lady's heart. Lucy Fox happens to be the lady he courts in this case and it is said she gives one of her best performances as an eastern belle who ventures to open a manicure shop in a town where her only patrons are rough-and-ready cow-punchers.

WCCO MAY GET PERMISSION TO USE 2,000-WATT POWER

Minneapolis, May 15.—WCCO, the Gold Medal station, may broadcast on 2,000 watts power before long, it was announced today.

The announcement was made following the visit of Robert E. Earle, assistant radio inspector for the 9th district.

The additional power would make WCCO heard more plainly in distant parts of the country. It is being heard in virtually every part of the United States with its present 1,500 watts.

Mr. Earle said receiving conditions were better here than in most parts of this district because of the co-operation of power companies and other sources of radio interference.

The Home Garden

What is Home without a Garden?

Many annuals are as valuable or even more valuable for their foliage than their bloom and are very useful in the garden. Some of them owe their entire beauty to brilliantly colored foliage. The prickly poppies, argemones, now coming in fine double hybrids and ranging from white to light yellow, have handsome thistlelike foliage of gray tones with white veinings in addition to their silky bloom. They are always ornamental.

The most brilliant of the foliage

The "dusty millers," cineraria maritima and centaurea candidissima, can be raised in quantity for edgings from a single packet of seed. The euphorbias, close relatives of the brilliant poinsettia of holiday season, give two showy annuals, the old-fashioned green and white snow-on-the-mountain and the Mexican fire plant, E. heterophylla, a miniature poinsettia with brilliant scarlet heads of leaves. The feverfew and nasturtium come in bright golden leaved forms useful for their foliage alone.

annuals is the amaranthus, a glorified pig weed which has arrayed itself in gorgeous garments. Burbank has produced some wonderfully brilliant types of this plant. Ranging from dark purple to glowing scarlets, these easily grown annuals make brilliant display.

The cannas of stately foliage and gorgeous bloom are not hard to raise from seed if the hard, shot-like seeds are filed thin on one side and soaked in warm water for 24 hours before planting. They bloom the first season from seed.

Other books that had great sales were "Cetawayo and His First Neighbors," "Dawn" and "The Witch's Head."

His last works published in 1923

Portia's father was old-fashioned

In the days of Shakespeare's famous heroine, buying and selling were contests of wits. In Venice, haggling and dickering were the vogue. Along the Rialto, sharp practice was the rule. Every purchase of silk or spices was made at the buyer's risk. One had to be a shrewd judge of values and one's fellows to escape trickery.

Portia's father—a merchant—was used to the ideas of guess, luck and accident. So much so, indeed, that it seemed natural to him to entrust the choice of his daughter's husband to three closed caskets and a lucky guess!

Nowadays, we do not transact business blindly—nor leave important decisions to chance. It is not necessary for us to gamble when we buy. Commodities are identified for us by trade-marks. Manufacturers go to the advertising columns to tell us about their products. Merchants describe their merchandise—price, quality and service.

By reading advertisements, we get a knowledge of goods and stores that we can depend on. Advertising reduces chance, in buying, to a minimum.

CHIEF CONDUCTS CAMPAIGN

Police Claim Many of Simplest Rules of the Road Are Being Disregarded

A number of traffic violators were gathered into municipal court on Thursday morning as the result of a campaign inaugurated by Chief of Police Roy N. Zierke, and his assistants, to enforce the city's traffic laws.

Many of the simplest rules of the road are being disregarded, according to the police, so that the rights of other motorists and of pedestrians are encroached upon. Among these are the cutting across an intersection when rounding a corner, instead of making the wide swing around the traffic signals, running after dark without displaying proper lights, license numbers not placed upon the car in such a manner that they can be easily read, and probably the most serious violation, that of speeding.

All of these ordinances and others governing traffic on the streets of the city, are to be rigidly enforced in the future, and motorists are warned that arrests will follow violations.

C. W. Shepard, E. Hopp, L. O. Johnson, John Dahl and Nels Niska were arraigned on charges of traffic violations, each pleading guilty and each being assessed a fine of $2, as first offenders.

L. Dow plead guilty to a charge of speeding, and was fined $5.

HEAP OF STARS

IN MINSTREL SHOW

No Attempt to Single Out Any Individual Headliners in Lions Show

ALL HOME TALENT PLAYERS

Musical Fantasy of Lions to be Given at New Park Theatre May 19 and 20

Any attempt at singling out individual performers as headliners in the Lions Minstrel Mimics would be a failure, for Jack Geller, director for the John B. Rogers Production Company has, through his intensive rehearsals, made each one a star.

The Lions Minstrel Mimics is a musical fantasy, with all home talent players, but all imported costumes, that will be given at the New Park theatre on next Tuesday and Wednesday, May 19th and 20th, under the auspices of the Brainerd Lions club.

Practically all of the stars of former home talent plays are included in the cast, with a number of new ones. Seventy-five people are rehearsing every evening, and each one is very enthusiastic about the clever lines, the catchy songs and the pretty dances that make up the production. Nothing like it has ever been shown in Brainerd before, or ever attempted in this section of the state.

The first part is an innovation in minstrel shows, something entirely new, containing much original and local color. Twenty-three men are in the circle, entertaining with songs, stories and dances.

The second section, or Act II, consists of two parts, "A Day at the Brainerd Country Club Links," with principals and a large chorus, and "The Popular Song Revue" also with a large chorus.

The third section is really the big surprise. It is a musical comedy of truly great proportions, with 12 principals and a large grass-skirt chorus of island belles. Those who have been privileged to witness the rehearsals say that the comedy is a knock-out from start to finish.

The big leading part in this musical comedy is Queen Olives, despotic ruler of "The Isle of Never Known." Because of her great size, the leading this part does not suit her identity revealed, so out of courtesy to her, this character's name is being kept a dark secret. Suffice it to say that she has a big comedy part, and carries it through to a hilarious finish.

Inkypoo, the queen's rheumatic prime minister, is portrayed by Ted Kretschmar, who handles the part as though it had been written especially for him.

"Inky" has two very talented daughters, Kalua and Kilua, who in real life are the Misses Mayme Scallen and Ella Olson. Three goofy gobs from a stranded U. S. ship, George Sweet, W. E. Anderson, and L. E. Hough, make a big contribution to the comedy. Anderson and Hough fall in love with Inky's daughters, but Queen Olives has other plans. Result, more comedy.

Some mighty classy dancing is introduced in this section, both by the grass-skirt chorus, and by a line-up of gobs, the latter staging some new versions of the hornpipe.

Musical numbers featured include "June Night," "Tell Her in the Springtime," "Stingo Stungo," and "Somebody Loves Me." The grand finale is nearly an act in itself, and a special request is made that the audience remain seated until it is all over, for it is the climax of the evening, and something new in closing a musical comedy.

Tickets are being offered for sale by members of the cast, and are said to be going like hot cakes, for no one wants to miss this great musical mirthquake. These tickets may be reserved at the New Park theatre box office on or after Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, being exchangeable for reserved seats for either Tuesday's or Wednesday's performance. The Lions club hopes that there will be no disappointments through failure on the part of anyone to purchase tickets well in advance.

City Treasurer Richard Ilse Addresses N. E. Brainerd Improvement League

MANY CITY DEBTS ARE PAID

Money Being Raised by Citizens in Ward to Drag Certain Streets

Those who attended the meeting of the Northeast Brainerd Improvement League on Wednesday evening heard some very interesting facts regarding bonds and taxes in the city, explained by City Treasurer Richard Ilse.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Ilse stated that a large part of the old bonded indebtedness of the city and county has been paid, including the Northeast Brainerd all bonds, the Brainerd and Northern Railway bonds, and the Mississippi dam bonds. A large amount has been paid on the old waterworks bonds, and with the assistance of the gross earnings tax revenue, the finances of the city are in creditable condition at this time, said Mr. Ilse.

The streets and boulevard committee of the League reported that voluntary subscriptions had been received from residents along a number of the streets of the ward and that Albia Mohler has been engaged to drag these streets after every rain during the season. This plan was tried out last year, at the suggestion of A. O. Peterson, on one street, and proved so satisfactory that others adopted the plan and are enjoying good streets at but small cost to anyone.

The committee in charge of the gladioli sale reported having sold 2,425 bulbs. On inquiry from the members present, it was learned that over 90 per cent of the peonies planted last fall were growing nicely.

A committee was appointed to confer with the county commissioners regarding highway matters. The streets and boulevard committee will look into the matter of having some trees planted along the fill.

Hugo A. Kaatz, of the Brainerd Park Board, said that this board is endeavoring to find some way of getting a pathway for pedestrians, leading to Lum park. The board is considering the matter of a small bridge across the creek at the entrance to the park, but find it hard to do anything at this time, owing to the reduced tax revenue.

Mr. Kaatz stated that the tables have been placed at the park and are already being used by picnic parties. He wished to urge the churches and lodges of the city to make use of the park more this summer than before.

A large portion of the new addition to Lum park has been cleared of underbrush and now makes more parking space, which is very much needed. Appreciation was expressed at the action of the city council in giving Lum park more band concerts during the coming summer season.

The next meeting of the Northeast Brainerd Improvement League will be held at the call of the president, Mrs. J. H. Herbert, who presided in a very efficient manner at Wednesday evening's meeting.

HEAP OF STARS IN MINSTREL SHOW

No Attempt to Single Out Any Individual Headliners in Lions Show

ALL HOME TALENT PLAYERS

Musical Phantasy of Lions to be Given at New Park Theatre
May 19 and 20

Any attempt at singling out individual performers as headliners in the Lions Minstrel Mimics would be a failure, for Jack Geller, director for the John B. Rogers Production Company has, through his intensive rehearsals, made each one a star.

The Lions Minstrel Mimics is a musical fantasy, with all home talent players, but all imported costumes, that will be given at the New Park theatre on next Tuesday and Wednesday, May 19th and 20th, under the auspices of the Brainerd Lions club.

Practically all of the stars of former home talent plays are included in the cast, with a number of new ones. Seventy-five people are rehearsing every evening, and each one is very enthusiastic about the clever lines, the catchy songs and the pretty dances that make up the production. Nothing like it has ever been shown in Brainerd before, or ever attempted in this section of the state.

The first part is an innovation in minstrel shows, something entirely new, containing much original and local color. Twenty-three men are in the circle, entertaining with songs, stories and dances.

The second section, or Act II, consists of two parts, "A Day at the Brainerd Country Club Links," with principals and a large chorus, and "The Popular Song Revue" also with a large chorus.

The third section is really the big surprise. It is a musical comedy of truly great proportions, with 12 principals and a large grass-skirt chorus of island belles. Those who have been privileged to witness the rehearsals say that the comedy is a knock-out from start to finish. The big leading part in this musical comedy is Queen Olives, despotic ruler of "The Isle of Never Known." Because of her great size, the leading part does not wish her identity revealed, but out of courtesy to her, this character's name is being kept a dark secret. Suffice it to say that she has a big comedy part, and carries it through to a hilarious finish.

Inkypoo, the queen's rheumatic prime minister, is portrayed by Ted Kretschmar, who handles the part as though it had been written especially for him. "Inky" has two very talented daughters, Kalua and Kilia, who in real life are the Misses Mayme Scallen and Ella Olson. Three goofy gobs from a stranded U. S. ship, George Sweet, W. E. Anderson, and L. E. Hough, make a big contribution to the comedy. Anderson and Hough fall in love with Inky's daughters, but Queen Olives has other plans. Result, more comedy.

Some mighty classy dancing is introduced in this section, both by the grass-skirt chorus, and by a line-up of gobs, the latter staging some new versions of the hornpipe.

Musical numbers featured include "June Night," "Tell Her in the Springtime," "Stingo Stungo," and "Somebody Loves Me." The grand finale is nearly an act in itself, and a special request is made that the audience remain seated until it is all over, for it is the climax of the evening, and something new in closing a musical comedy.

Tickets are being offered for sale by members of the cast, and are said to be going like hot cakes, for no one wants to miss this great musical mirthquake. These tickets may be reserved at the New Park theatre box office on or after Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, being exchangeable for reserved seats for either Tuesday's or Wednesday's performance. The Lions club hopes that there will be no disappointments through failure on the part of anyone to purchase tickets well in advance.

BONDS AND TAXES ARE EXPLAINED

City Treasurer Richard Ilse Addresses N. E. Brainerd Improvement League

MANY CITY DEBTS ARE PAID

Money Being Raised by Citizens in Ward to Drag Certain Streets

Those who attended the meeting of the Northeast Brainerd Improvement League on Wednesday evening heard some very interesting facts regarding bonds and taxes in the city, explained by City Treasurer Richard Ilse.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Ilse stated that a large part of the old bonded indebtedness of the city and county has been paid, including the Northeast Brainerd fill bonds, the Brainerd and Northern Railway bonds, and the Mississippi dam bonds. A large amount has been paid on the old waterworks bonds, and with the assistance of the gross earnings tax revenue, the finances of the city are in creditable condition at this time, said Mr. Ilse.

The streets and boulevard committee of the League reported that voluntary subscriptions had been received from residents along a number of the streets of the ward and that Albia Mohler has been engaged to drag these streets after every rain during the season. This plan was tried out last year, at the suggestion of A. O. Peterson, on one street, and proved so satisfactory that others adopted the plan and are enjoying good streets at but small cost to anyone.

The committee in charge of the gladioli sale reported having sold 2,425 bulbs. On inquiry from the members present, it was learned that over 90 per cent of the peonies planted last fall were growing nicely.

A committee was appointed to confer with the county commissioners regarding highway matters. The streets and boulevard committee will look into the matter of having some trees planted along the fill.

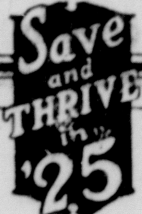

Hugo A. Kaatz, of the Brainerd Park Board, said that this board is endeavoring to find some way of getting a pathway for pedestrians, leading to Lum park. The board is considering the matter of a small bridge across the creek at the entrance to the park, but find it hard to do anything at this time, owing to the reduced tax revenue.

Mr. Kaatz stated that the tables have been placed at the park and are already being used by picnic parties. He wished to urge the churches and lodges of the city to make use of the park more this summer than before.

A large portion of the new addition to Lum park has been cleared of underbrush and now makes more parking space, which is very much needed. Appreciation was expressed at the action of the city council in giving Lum park more band concerts during the coming summer season.

The next meeting of the Northeast Brainerd Improvement League will be held at the call of the president, Mrs. J. H. Herbert, who presided in a very efficient manner at Wednesday evening's meeting.

RICKARD TELLS OF GROWTH OF BOXING

By HENRY L. PARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, May 15.—"Five years ago," Tex Rickard says, "it was almost impossible to get a reputable business man or professional man to attend a boxing bout. The better class of patronage were those who were not afraid of publicity or those who wanted it."

Rickard was discussing the great change that has taken place in the public attitude toward boxing from the time he took over Madison Square Garden when boxing was made legal again in New York and the recent date when the historic old structure was turned over to a wrecking crew.

The boxing game has gone through such a reformation in that time and has reached such a place of decency that the old Garden in its last three years of life made money for its owners for the first time and made possible the financing of a new $3,000,000 Garden when Rickard had to find a new place for his operations.

"When boxing came back to New York," Rickard says, "prominent people were afraid to attend. It was such a novelty to see first-class citizens at the ringside that the reporters used to make mention of all the good names that they could pick out of the crowd. Many prominent men told me they liked to watch a boxing bout, but they couldn't take the risk of losing business or social prestige by having their names printed as a witness."

Actors, of course, and Broadway characters who liked to have their names in the paper were good patrons for the higher-priced seats and they tried to make themselves prominent so that they would be noticed. Those who didn't want any public mention of their presence bought seats in the back of the house and came in after the lights had been turned down.

"The change in sentiment was first noticed when Miss Anne Morgan promoted a match between Benny Leonard and Richie Mitchell for the lightweight championship of the world. The match was staged for the benefit of the fund for Devastated France and it was attended by the most prominent people in society and public life. It was one of the best matches staged in New York. There was a knockout, but there was nothing of the brutal or unsightly about the contest. Those who had any knowledge of the sport or knew the significance of a change in the title were thrilled when Leonard was floored and was almost knocked out by an opponent who was out on his feet. In all my experience I don't believe that I saw a more dramatic moment."

GAME WAS CALLED ACCOUNT OF DARKNESS

SCORE STOOD AT 10 TO 10 AS SHADES OF NIGHT FELL

TWO INNINGS PLAYED WERE WEIRD AFFAIRS BY BOTH TEAMS

The Seal, and Y. M. C. A. battled five innings to a draw last night at the Koering grounds, the game being called at the end of the fifth inning on account of darkness, with the score standing at 10-10. Two innings were weird affairs, the second, when the Y. M. C. A. ran in six runs on five hits and two passes, and the third, which netted the Seals seven counters on five hits, a brace of walks, and an error.

Neither team played up to form. The game seemed an experiment in positions, players being shifted around at will, and no combination seeming to suit the managers. The Y used three pitchers, and the Seals two.

Some nice fielding was done by individuals on both teams. Gaskill leaped into the air for a line drive off Thorkildson's bat that looked good for a hit. Imgrund went into the crowd to pull down a high foul from Anderson. The Y. M. C. A. infield pulled another double play, bringing their total to two double plays and one triple play in two games.

Van Walk pitched good ball for the Seals, but the Y line-up was feeling in the mood for slugging, and he fared no better than Ziebell. The three pitchers for the Y could not stem the tide of Seals' runs.

Tonight the A. O. U. W. and B. A. C. play for the cellar championship.
